ABC Women in Engineering Scholarships 2008

The Technology & Distribution Division of the Australian Broadcasting Corporation is pleased to invite applications for the 2008 ABC Women in Engineering Scholarships.

The ABC Women in Engineering Scholarships were established in 1992 to promote the education, training and practice of engineering among women in the fields of broadcasting and technology. The contemporary ABC is a diversified media enterprise that produces and delivers audio and screen-based content for audiences throughout Australia and internationally.

Up to eight scholarships are offered annually to Australian women in either their 1st, 2nd or 3rd year of an Electrical Engineering Degree, Diploma or similar, to encourage them to pursue a career in the broadcast industry. The scholarship includes an award of $1500 plus a period of work experience in technology areas of the ABC.

Requirements

Selection is based on academic merit, interview performance, the reasons for undertaking the course and personal qualities (for example, communication skills, creativity and problem solving, and community involvement). In order for your application to be considered, candidates must meet the following criteria:

- be enrolled full time in an electrical engineering, telecommunications, IT degree, electrotechnology diploma, or a related discipline
- be able to demonstrate an interest in broadcasting and technology
- be an Australian citizen

How to Apply

You must include the following four items in your application:

- covering letter with an outline of your studies and how they relate to the scholarship and broadcasting/technology
- transcript of your academic results
- resume
- letter of referral from the relevant faculty member (professor or teaching assistant), or an academic adviser.

Please send your completed application to:

The ABC Technical Services Manager
c/- GPO Box 9994 in your capital city

Applications close Friday, 30 May 2008

Applicants should note that a short period of industry placement in a technology area of the ABC is a condition of the Scholarships.
